Dear

Although our Director of Personnel will be writing to you shortly, I wanted to supplement the official correspondence with a personal note concerning the outcome of your application.

I regret to say that there is no opening in your particular field at this time, nor does it appear likely that any vacancies will occur within the foreseeable future. This is an area in which we are particularly full, and several expected vacancies did not materialize.

I enjoyed meeting you during my recruiting trip to New York, and wish to assure you that the interview we had was entirely satisfactory.

Sincerely yours,
